Subject: The Suit against Microsoft

Please drop the suit against Microsoft and let them get on with their business, which is serving its customers the best they can.

I've never understood why government can't stand to see any company be successful. Of course, the business of government is to prevent force and fraud, but Microsoft was not involved in "force or fraud", apparently. The government attempt to level the playing field inhibits good businesses from doing what they do best: serve the customers. The market will do the right thing if government will get out of the way and quit meddling in the affairs of the market.

If force (the gun) or fraud (as in Enron) occurs, then let the government bring Microsoft to justice and incarcerate the criminals involved. I don't see Microsoft as a proper target for the DOJ and you've been at this too long. Give it up.
